

Civil War Essential Questions:

1. To what extent was slavery a "cause" of the Civil War?
  - Slavery was the main cause of the Civil War because it is what made any other major issue between the North and South an issue. Whether you consider states' rights, or agriculture vs industrialization, or sectionalism...each of those were divisive issues in the country because of how the two sides viewed slavery.
2. Was war inevitable after the sectional crises of the 1850s?
  - Secession was definitely inevitable after the sectional issues of the 1850's polarized the North and South to an even greater, and more fanatical, degree. When you consider how heated the debates were surrounding the Compromise of 1850 (which included a secession threat) and the violence brought on by the Kansas-Nebraska Act, it is safe bet to say that war was also inevitable.
3. What were the circumstances surrounding the attack at Fort Sumter? What effect did the attack have on Northern opinion of Southern secession?
  - The newly formed Confederacy believed Fort Sumter, which guarded the harbor of Charleston, SC, was owned by them because it was in their "country", but the US (North/Union) did not recognize the legitimacy of the Confederacy, so they believed it was still a US military fort. Lincoln sent a ship to re-supply the fort, but the South had issued an ultimatum to Major Anderson, the US commander of the fort, to leave the fort or face bombardment. He chose to stay, so the fort was fired upon. Both sides claimed they were right and it served as an indication of how divided the two sides were even in how they defined the legitimacy of each other's claims.
  - The Battle of Fort Sumter caused Lincoln to formally claim that an armed rebellion against the US had begun. When he called for 75,000 volunteers to "put down the rebellion", the South was able to claim that the North had begun an invasion of their "country"
4. What were the advantages and disadvantages of the South when entering the war? What were the advantages and disadvantages of the North when entering the war?
  - These are clearly outlined in the overview notes I've linked on the wiki.
5. Why did the European nations refrain from aiding the South in the war? How and why did King Cotton fail the South?
  - Slavery was the main reason Europe refrained from aiding the South – they were morally against slavery and siding with a nation trying to maintain that institution would have been internationally unpopular. While feeling the pinch of economic sanctions can often times causes nations to go against such principles, the South's over-reliance on cotton production (King Cotton) hurt them here. Most European nations had ample stockpiles of cotton and the South had very little else to economically hang over the heads of European nations to influence them to alter their ideals.
6. How were women aided by the Civil War?
