

Darwin's theory of evolution

- Many of Darwin's observations indicated that geographic proximity is a better predictor of relationships among organisms than similarity of environment.
- He hypothesized that as the descendants of a remote ancestor spread into various habitats over millions and millions of years, they accumulated diverse modifications, or adaptations, that fit them to specific ways of life in their environment.
- Consequently, scientists regard Darwin's concept of evolution by means of natural selection as a theory, a widely accepted explanatory idea that
 - is broader in scope than a hypothesis,
 - generates new hypotheses, and
 - is supported by a large body of evidence.
- Next we examine lines of evidence for Darwin's theory of evolution, the idea that living species are descendants of ancestral species that were different from present-day ones and that natural selection is the mechanism for evolutionary change.
- Fossils
 - are the imprints or remains of organisms that lived in the past,
 - document differences between past and present organisms, and
 - reveal that many species have become extinct.
- The sequence in which fossils appear within strata, layers of sedimentary rocks, is a historical record of life on Earth.
- Paleontologists (scientists who study fossils) sometimes gain access to very old fossils when erosion carves through upper (younger) strata, revealing deeper (older) strata that had been buried.
- The fossil record is the chronicle of evolution over millions of years of geologic time engraved in the order in which fossils appear in rock strata.
- Evolution is a process of descent with modification.
 - Characteristics present in an ancestral organism are altered over time by natural selection as its descendants face different environmental conditions.
 - Evolution is a remodeling process.
 - Related species can have characteristics that have an underlying similarity yet function differently.
 - Similarity resulting from common ancestry is known as homology.
- Biologists call such anatomical similarities in different organisms homologous structures.
- An understanding of homology helps explain why
 - early stages of development in different animal species reveal similarities not visible in adult organisms and
- These vestigial structures are remnants of features that served important functions in the organism's ancestors.
- Today, biologists represent these patterns of descent with an evolutionary tree, although today they often turn the trees sideways.
- But insights into how incremental change occurs could be seen in examples of artificial selection, in which humans have modified species through selective breeding.
- It is important to emphasize three key points about evolution by natural selection.
 1. Although natural selection occurs through interactions between individual organisms and the environment, individuals do not evolve. Rather, it is the population, the group of organisms, that evolves over time.
 2. Natural selection can amplify or diminish only heritable traits.
