Abstract: Now a days there is use of automation in every sector. Here we are presenting a new model. This model of ringing bell is used everywhere from schools to colleges. It avoid the human help with accuracy as it is automatic. It uses Real Time Clock(DS1307) which track the real time. The microcontroller P89V51RD2 is used to control all the functions through program. When this programmed time equals the real time then the bell is switched ON via Relay for predetermined time at normal class timings as well as exam times.

Also we are using "GSM based LED Scrolling display Board" for displaying notices/messages at the places which require the real time, by sending SMS containing message through mobile. The SMS is deleted from the SIM each time it is read, thus making room for the next SMS.

I. INTRODUCTION

The task of ringing bell automatically is carried out by this project. It has an inbuilt Real Time Clock which shows the real time. When this real time equals to the bell ringing time then bell is switched ON following relay. The time is display on LED Scrolling Display Board. Using this project we implementation the idea of wireless communication between mobile phone and display board. This project include the following main components.

- Microcontroller-Philips P89V51RD2
- GSM modem-SIM 300
- Real Time Clock
- MAX232 level converter
- 7*48 LED display
- Shift Register 74HC595
- TIP 125/127
- Current limiting Resistors – 100 Ohm

The user uses a simple GSM based handset for sending message to display board. By using proper AT commands, GSM modem used to receive the msg at the receiver end which is read by the modem and stored in the microcontroller. In order to reduce the number of pins and to simplify the hardware this design uses "Charlieplexing Technique". In this technique the LED's can be connected in common anode or cathode configuration.
