How is it Made? Fuel

Blake Education, Classroom Video, 2009 – 5 minutes

When you go to the petrol station and Mum or Dad fills up the car, do you ever wonder where the fuel actually comes from?

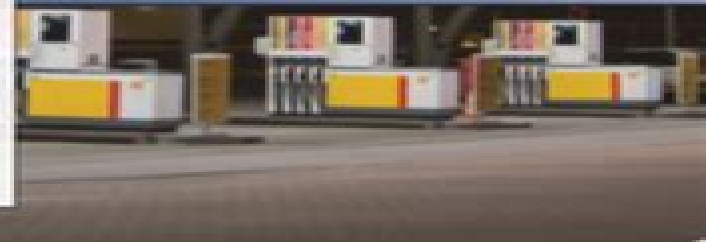

It's amazing to see that many products we use every day are made from the same material we put in our cars. From shoes to pens and even drink bottles, they are all made from oil.

This video gives us a fascinating look into how oil was created in the first place, and the process it goes through before it is ready to be used as fuel or to make other products. The two child narrators also look at some of the environmental problems caused by our use of fuel, such as oil spills and air pollution. Unfortunately, oil is a non-renewable resource, which means one day it will run out.

on ways to solve this problem. Already we can buy hybrid cars which use a lot less fuel than normal cars. I wonder what else the future will hold?

Making fuel is a very complicated process, yet the way the narrators explain the specific language and use moving diagrams to highlight key points makes it simple to follow. The experiments shown feature everyday items which anyone can use. These scenes have close-up shots so the audience can clearly see what is going on. At other times, when dealing with busy scenes, the scenes are short and snappy. The topic was examined and stuck to the facts.

Students from middle primary and even some in upper primary, would benefit from this knowledge about how one of our most important resources is developed. It could even lead them into developing new ideas about what their own futures might look like. A great classroom resource rated 5 out of 5.

Middle Primary

Text Type: Review of Media Texts
Word Count: 314

The main section (body) of a review includes details about the main characters. For example:

- their names
 - how are they related to each other (friends, relatives, enemies)
 - what happens to them
 - a description of them.
- Circle the words used by the author to evaluate or give an opinion about the character AL.

AL, about his (friend), is not your ordinary everyday alien, despite his small green appearance. His, or she, is in fact quite unusual. Most aliens we see in movies are far more advanced than we are and have an abundance of knowledge. But not AL, who is really silly. I was eating dog food to thinking from the garden house, AL shows us the funny side of life in the suburbs.

2. Think of a character in a media text you have viewed. Sketch the character in the box and write a brief summary.
