

Control of Blood Sugar Levels

Why?

All living things use glucose as a source of energy and in vertebrates it is critical that blood glucose levels are consistent. If the glucose concentration in the blood gets too high, a coma could result. If the glucose concentration in the blood gets too low, the person could experience seizures, go into a coma or die. In humans, hormone levels help regulate the glucose concentration in the blood and keep us in homeostasis.

Model 1 – Hormonal Control of Glucose

- Using the graph in Model 1:
 - Identify the molecules that have relative blood concentrations shown.
 - Identify the molecule that is found in the blood at the highest concentrations.
 - Outline what happens to blood glucose levels after a meal has been eaten.
- Describe why cells need glucose.
- Compare blood glucose to the hormone levels shown in the graph in Model 1:
 - As blood glucose levels increase above baseline, the level of which hormone also increases?
 - As blood glucose levels begin to drop below baseline, the concentration of which hormone increases?
 - As blood glucose returns to its baseline level, what happens to the levels of insulin and glucagon in the blood?

Blood Glucose Levels Leszek Szablewski, 2020-01-08. The main source of energy for the body is glucose. Its low blood concentrations can cause seizures, loss of consciousness, and death. Long-lasting high glucose levels can cause blindness, renal failure, cardiac and peripheral vascular disease, and neuropathy. Blood glucose concentrations need to be maintained within narrow limits. The process of maintaining blood glucose at a steady state is called glucose homeostasis. This is achieved through a balance of the rate of consumption of dietary carbohydrates, utilization of glucose by peripheral tissues, and the loss of glucose through the kidney tubule. The liver and kidney also play a role in glucose homeostasis. This book aims to provide an overview of blood glucose levels in health and diseases.
