

THE CAGEBIRDS

BY: DAVID CAMPTON

Wild One: (Shouting) Listen to me! All of you! You could be free. All of you! Must I be caged because you lack willpower?(she pauses, and looks around her. She gives a rueful little laugh) I have no right, have I? No right to commit such an outrage. (she goes up to one of the Ladies who, at the last minute, moves away-not obviously or insultingly, but as though she had just remembered that she ought to be somewhere else. Through the following speech this pattern is repeated, so the room is full of Ladies weaving about, without the Wild One getting too close to any of them) I come bursting in-actually I was tossed in, but let that pass. I come hurtling in, and within minutes turn your comfortable, satisfied, non-communicating, slave society upside down. I tear down the paper screens you built so carefully. I blew great gusts through the hot-house air. I shatter your fragile Sunday quiet. No, I didn't I only tried. I didn't succeed. I couldn't succeed, because you're not alive. You can't be alive, because if you were, you'd be charging at that door with me. This very minute. All shoulders together. Boom! Thud! Pow! Crash! But there you sit. I haven't the right to stir the dust. I'm the Wild One who doesn't belong. Ignore her. You have to ignore her, because if you didn't you'd either have to break out or break down. I'm sorry. No, I'm not, but it's an accepted figure of speech. I'm sorry, but if you don't like me, you'll have to do the other thing. I'm sorry, but I'm the Wild One, and the cage hasn't been built that can hold me.
