

Research on Child Hunger

A future, which depends on the youngest generation for it to prosper are dying. Death and hunger are the closest of friends when the world is experiencing hunger. Child hunger is at its worst it has ever been, its one the world biggest problems; many things contribute to this epidemic. Diseases, food and job insecurity, and a country being weak and depressed are major contributors. There are endless amount of options to end this poverty; reading a book, spreading the word, hosting and volunteering at food drives, etc. According to WHES, "6.3 million children under age five died in 2013, nearly 17,000 every day." In the United States, rounded to about 11,280 babies are born every day. There are more children dying in a day than being born. The organization, Bread for the World, states that nutritional quality is to be taken into consideration because the people who are hungry are malnourished. Malnutrition is a category of diseases in which contains undernutrition and overnutrition. "A lack of vitamin C can result in scurvy.

Scurvy is rare in industrialized nations, but it can affect older people, those who consume excessive quantities of alcohol, and people who do not eat fresh fruits and vegetables. Some infants and children who follow a limited diet for any reason may be prone to scurvy." , "It can also slow recovery from wounds and illnesses, and it can complicate diseases such as measles, pneumonia, malaria, and diarrhea. It can leave the body more susceptible to disease." (Christian Nordqvist). "Food insecurity is the household's inability to provide enough food for every person to live an active, healthy life," says Feeding America. "Some of the serious effects of food insecurity are when there serious health complications, especially when people facing hunger are forced to choose between spending money on food and medicine or medical care; damage to a child's ability to learn and grow; and difficult decisions for seniors — often living on fixed incomes — such as choosing between paying for food and critical healthcare." (Feeding America).

Those who have to worry whether their job will remain stable are affiliated to those with food insecurity. Many families around the world are affected by job insecurity; either unable to find a job or the pay isn't enough to support them. Another contribution to job insecurity, according to Bread for the World is, "the parent may not be able to take a job or work enough hours because of no childcare options." A country's economy affects children and their families the most in every way. Job and food insecurity, lack of medical care, and hunger are happenings of the economy. "Any fluctuation that pushes food prices up creates additional hardship. Basic grains such as wheat, rice, and corn make up the largest share of calories among people in developing countries who are hungry. In 2009, prices of these grains spiked and hunger surged for a short time b
