

Chicago Style: Humanities

Based on The Chicago Manual of Style, 16th Edition and A Pocket Style Manual, 7th Edition

Many humanities instructors, including those in history and the arts, require students to use the notes and bibliography system of Chicago Style. Chicago citations consist of numbered notes in the text of the paper. These notes refer the reader to either footnotes (at the bottom of the page) or endnotes (at the end of the paper) which are numbered correspondingly.

The first time a source is cited, full information is provided, including author (first name first), title, and facts of publication. These elements are separated by commas, with facts of publication in parentheses. Subsequent citations require only the last name of the author, a shortened version of the title of the work cited, and page number where applicable. In notes, the first line is indented.

Usually, a supplemental bibliography is required as well. In the bibliography, the last name of the author is listed first, elements are separated by periods rather than commas, and the facts of publication are not in parentheses. In the bibliography, lines following the first are indented.

Check with your instructor to see if he/she prefers footnotes or endnotes, and whether a bibliography is also required.
