Picture the firefly

Picture the firefly was tired of the same old routine. Every night, the fireflies in their meadow would gather, flash their lights in unison, and then drift off to sleep. Flicker longed for adventure: to see beyond the familiar borders of grass and tall wildflowers. One evening as the other fireflies began their routine blink, Flicker shaped his desire.

He waited until the meadow was dark, then with a tiny whoosh, he darted off. He flew past sleeping crickets and mooring beetles, his little light illuminating his path. He reached the edge of the meadow and gazed: in front of him stretched a vast forest, its towering trees casting long shadows. Flicker felt a thrill course through him. This was uncharted territory.

He flitted deeper into the woods, his tiny light barely penetrating the distance. Startled Flicker froze. An owl he knew only lived to hunt.

Just then a soft voice spoke: "Don't be afraid, little one." A glow saw you're lost." Flicker explained how he yearned for adventure full of dangers.

"You need a guide," Flicker's light flickered with hope. "Would you show glowing mushrooms, meet singing crickets, and even dance."

He learned about the delicate balance of the forest, the impact to the meadow. Flicker promised to be more cautious when he returned.

From that night on, Flicker continued to join the other fireflies, bigger than he imagined, filled with fascinating creatures. He remembered the importance of safety and respect for all.
