Laboratory Experiments in Information Retrieval Tetsuya Sakai, 2018-09-22 Covering aspects from principles and limitations of statistical significance tests to topic set size design and power analysis this book guides readers to statistically well designed experiments Although classical statistical significance tests are to some extent useful in information retrieval IR evaluation they can harm research unless they are used appropriately with the right sample sizes and statistical power and unless the test results are reported properly The first half of the book is mainly targeted at undergraduate students and the second half is suitable for graduate students and researchers who regularly conduct laboratory experiments in IR natural language processing recommendations and related fields Chapters 1-5 review parametric significance tests for comparing system means namely t tests and ANOVAs and show how easily they can be conducted using Microsoft Excel or R These chapters also discuss a few multiple comparison procedures for researchers who are interested in comparing every system pair including a randomised version of Tukey's Honestly Significant Difference test. The chapters then deal with known limitations of classical significance testing and provide practical guidelines for reporting research results regarding comparison of means. Chapters 6 and 7 discuss statistical power. Chapter 6 introduces topic set size design to enable test collection builders to determine an appropriate number of topics to create. Readers can easily use the author's Excel tools for topic set size design based on the paired and two sample t tests, one way ANOVA and confidence intervals. Chapter 7 describes power analysis based methods for determining an appropriate sample size for a new experiment based on a similar experiment done in the past, detailing how to utilize the author's R tools for power analysis and how to interpret the results. Case studies from IR for both Excel based topic set size design and R based power analysis are also provided. Hyundai Excel Mike Stubblefield, John Harold Haynes, 1991.
