1. Refer to Figure 9.1. How does the climograph help us understand location-related trends and what you can determine from the climograph. There are two questions to help you with your response: does the location's temperature range (a) is it within about a 10°C temperature range throughout the year? (b) is the daily range around 10°C or above? The climograph also is helpful in determining the effects of a region's topography because of elevation differences. It also indicates an average monthly temperature and rainfall that some climatologists use to define a region. This helps us understand area's overall climatic conditions, average temperature, air humidity, precipitation, rainfall amounts, temperature annual range, and daily range.
2. Compare the two climographs shown below (Figure 9.2). The climograph of Jeddah (left) is a hot dry climate with average annual rainfall of 1.7 mm. The climograph of London (right) is a typical wet temperate climograph (see the right) representing a location with 10°C average monthly average temperature and rainfall variations compared to Jeddah.
3. Compare the two climographs shown below (Figure 9.3). Both locations are near 30° North latitude (check climographs) (see the left) or is (see the right) representing typical tropical wet climate. In a hot climate, the climograph represents a location with higher precipitation than Jeddah and less average rainfall temperature than Jeddah.
4. Compare the two climographs shown below (Figure 9.4). Both locations are located at 30° North latitude. They illustrate differences between the climographs. In the left climograph, rainfall precipitation is high and temperature is high. In the right climograph, rainfall precipitation is low and temperature is high. This is because climographs illustrate location based on the area where the location is. In a hot climate, the climate is more tropical than the climograph. 5. Both locations shown by their climographs in Figure 9.5 are near 30° latitude. Based on the climographs shown on the climographs, how do you think the climate is in the location or location? The climograph of Jeddah (left) is a hot dry climate. The climograph of London (right) is a hot dry climate. They are in the same location but have different climate patterns.
