

DNA, Replication and Protein Synthesis

DNA replication is a process that happens during S phase of the cell cycle. The main goal is to make an exact replica of your cell's DNA so that the cell cycle can continue on in creating two identical cells.

STEP 1:
The DNA is unzipped by DNA helicase so both sides can be used as a template.

STEP 2:
Complementary bases are added to each template strand by DNA polymerase.

STEP 3:
Each new strand is joined left and right back together by DNA ligase.

The building blocks of DNA

- There are five major nucleotides, and they are different based on their nitrogenous bases.
- The five nucleotides are Adenine, Guanine, Thymine, Cytosine, and Uracil.
  - Thymine is only found in DNA.
  - Uracil is only found in mRNA.
- In DNA, uracil is always replaced by thymine.
  - The number of C and G is always the same.
  - Likewise, the number of A and T is always the same.
- Uracil is single stranded, so it does not have base pairs.

Protein Synthesis

DNA → mRNA → Protein

- "Synthesis" means "to create". Therefore, the goal of protein synthesis is create a protein.
- Proteins have thousands of specific functions in the body, and they are needed to survive.
- This process happens in two steps: transcription and translation.

- Transcription is the process of copying the instructions of DNA into mRNA. This happens in the nucleus.
  - mRNA will carry the instructions from the nucleus to the ribosome.
- In the copying process:
  - A → U
  - C → G
  - T → A
  - G → C
- Each mRNA codon (group of 3 bases) codes for one amino acid, which is a building block of a protein. To determine which one, use the amino acid chart.

- Translation is the process where the ribosome reads the mRNA and places amino acids in the correct order to make a protein. This happens at the ribosome.
  - mRNA delivers the correct amino acids to the ribosome using an anticodon.
- Remember, the anticodon on tRNA cannot be used on the amino acid chart. This chart can only be used with an mRNA codon.
