- Quinsu Oshesho Cugana was kidnapped from his African home as a young boy and sold into slavery. In this excerpt from his 1967 autobiography, he describes his ordeal:

The horrors I soon saw and felt, cannot be well described; I saw many of my miserable countrymen chained two and two, some handcuffed, and some with their hands tied behind.... When we landed at the castle, I saw how [the kidnappers] take a gun, a piece of cloth, and some food [in exchange] for me, and then he told me that he must now leave me there, and went off. This made me very lonely, but I was soon conducted to a prison, for three days when I heard the groans and cries of many, and saw some of my fellow-captives. But when a vessel arrived to conduct us away to the ship, it was a most horrible scene; there was nothing to be heard but the crying of chains, smacking of whips, and the groans and cries of our fellow-men. Some would not rise from the ground, when they were lashed and beat in the most horrible manner. I have forgotten the name of this terrible boat, but we were taken in the ship that came for us, to another that was ready to sail from Cape Coast. When we were put into the ship, we saw several black merchants standing on board, but we were all driven into our hold, and not allowed to speak to any of them. In this situation we continued several days in sight of our native land, but I could find no good person to give any information of my situation.... And when we found ourselves at last taken away, death was more preferable than life; and a plan was concerted amongst us, that we might turn and blow up the ship, and so perish all together in the flames; but we were betrayed by one of our own countrymen....

1. What did the kidnapper mother in exchange for delivering Cugana?
2. What were the conditions like on the ship for the captured Africans?
3. Why did the plan to blow the ship not succeed? What might have been the outcome behind the betrayal?
4. How do you think Cugana's published writings might have helped the cause of abolition (ending slavery)?

- An early-18th-century letter from governor of Kongo to southern Morocco to the King of China is reflected below:

We are neighbors in benevolence even if we differ in religion; we agree on right conduct and are not in brotherly towards our subjects. It goes without saying that justice is an essential quality of kings in conducting sound policy; tyranny is the preoccupation of ignorance and evil minds. We have heard about the imprisonment of poor traders and their being prevented from going freely about their business. That coming to and from merchants to a country is of benefit to its inhabitants and a help in keeping it populous. If we wished we would imprison the people of that region who happen to be in our territory but we do not think it right to do that. We ought not to "harsh immediately while practicing it ourselves". Please for upon you.
