the study group was in some degree reduced by negative feedback and the negative people were less represented than in the other two groups. Moreover, the negative and negative-cynical people were in all conditions (before, during and after the training) more likely than the positive people to be perceived as being negative and cynical by the interviewers. However, the negative and negative-cynical people were not perceived as being more negative and cynical than the positive people.

The iterative operation of the algorithm further reduces the number of iterations required for convergence. The algorithm is implemented in the MATLAB software package.
