Confronting Capital Punishment in Asia Roger Hood,Surya Deva,2013-11-07 With the strengthening focus worldwide on human rights there has been a rapid increase in recent years in the number of countries that have completely abolished the death penalty This is in recognition that it is a violation of the right to life and the right to be free from cruel inhuman and degrading punishment There has simultaneously been pressure on countries that still retain capital punishment to ensure that they at least apply the United Nations minimum human rights safeguards established to protect the rights of those facing the death penalty This book shows that the majority of Asian countries have been particularly resistant to the abolitionist movement and tardy in accepting their responsibility to uphold the safeguards The essays contained in this volume provide an in depth analysis of changes in the scope and application of the death penalty in Asia with a focus on China India Japan and Singapore They explain the extent to which these nations still fail to accept capital punishment as a human rights issue identify impediments to reform and explore the prospects that Asian countries will eventually embrace the goal of worldwide abolition of capital punishment Capital Punishment Lill Scherdin,2016-04-08 As most jurisdictions move away from the death penalty some remain strongly committed to it while others hold on to it but use it sparingly This volume seeks to understand why by examining the death penalty s relationship to state governance in the past and present It also examines how international transnational and national forces intersect in order to understand the possibilities of future death penalty abolition The chapters cover the USA the only western democracy that still uses the death penalty and Asia the site of some 90 per cent of all executions Also included are discussions of the death penalty in Islam and its practice in selected Muslim majority countries There is also a comparative chapter departing from the response to the mass killings in Norway in 2011 Leading experts in law criminology and human rights combine theory and empirical research to further our understanding of the relationships between ways of governance the role of leadership and the death penalty practices This book questions whether the death penalty in and of itself is a hazard to a sustainable development of criminal justice It is an invaluable resource for all those researching and campaigning for the global abolition of capital punishment

The Death Penalty Roger Hood,Carolyn Hoyle,2008 The 4th edition edition of this classic study has been thoroughly revised to provide up to date information on the scope and practice of capital punishment and the movement backed by international organizations and human rights treaties to abolish the death penalty worldwide As in previous editions it draws on Roger Hood s experience as consultant to the United Nations for the Secretary General s five yearly surveys of capital punishment as well as the latest information from non governmental organizations and the academic literature Not only have more countries such as the Phillipines abolished capital punishment but amongst those that retain the death penalty fewer have been carrying out executions Legal challenges to the mandatory imposition of capital punishment have been successful as has the movement to abolish the death penalty for those who commit a capital crime when under the age of 18 Of particular interest is the situation in China where all death sentences are to be reviewed by the People s Supreme Court Support for capital punishment is waning in the USA where concern is mounting as evidence of conviction of the innocent grows and where there have been renewed challenges to the constitutionality of the death penalty Despite the many advances towards world wide abolition this book reveals many human rights abuses where the death penalty still exists These include the wide range of crimes still subject to capital punishment in some countries the lack of protection from police abuse unfair trials lack of access to qualified defence counsel terrible conditions and excessive periods of time spent on death row and public and painful forms of execution Roger Hood and Carolyn Hoyle engage with the latest debates on the realities of capital punishment especially the claim that the death penalty is a uniquely effective deterrent to murder and other serious crimes This edition brings up to date the discussion of whether capital punishment can ever be administered equitably without discrimination or error and for the first time considers the alternatives to capital punishment especially the problems associated with a mandatory sentence to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole This edition also considers the role and influence of victims families and victim interest movements
