Did you know that the two early Chinese wall building dynasties were the Han and the Qin? The Qin dynasty period was 221 BCE to 206 BCE and the Han dynasty period was 206 BCE to 220 CE. The Great Wall of China is really not one continuous wall, it is actually a series of walls constructed over a period of 2,500 years. The stone Great Wall of China that we see today was actually built in the Ming Dynasty which ruled over 1,500 periods after the Han. The great wall of China in the Han and Qin period built the wall to protect them from the Xiongnu. Did the benefits of the Great Wall of China in the Han and the Qin period outweigh the cost? The great wall of china in the Han and the Qin period was not worth the cost of building it because of the following three reasons: harsh working conditions, the Xiongnu successfully invaded and high mortality.

Firstly, it was not worth the cost of building the great wall of china in the Han and Qin period if there were harsh working conditions. From Document E: Peasants and Soldiers it says "Qin Dynasty Soldiers: Soldiers forced to leave families and villages for several years. According to poetry and legend, tens of thousands of soldiers died from hunger, sickness, and xtreme heat or cold. Han Dynasty Soldiers: Soldiers to work on the wall for two to five years. Peasants (Qin and Han) During the short ten-year period of Qin wall-building, there was heavy use of peasants laborers, who worked seven-day work weeks with little food" From Document F: Poetry of the Great Wall it says "The cavalry fight to the death, their exhausted teeds pace up and down Whinnying. Although we are willing to serve loyally, how can we live this way?" My evidence shows that the soldiers and peasants of the Han and Qin suffered the cost from building the wall. My evidence shows that the farmers, soldiers and peasants of the Han and Qin suffered the cost of building
