Political Theories of Decolonization Margaret Kohn, Keally McBride, 2011-03-16 Political Theories of Decolonization provides an introduction to some of the seminal texts of postcolonial political theory The difficulty of founding a new regime is an important theme in political theory and the intellectual history of decolonization provides a rich albeit overlooked opportunity to explore it Many theorists have pointed out that the colonized subject was a divided subject This book argues that the postcolonial state was a divided state While postcolonial states were created through the struggle for independence they drew on both colonial institutions and reinvented pre colonial traditions Political Theories of Decolonization illuminates how many of the central themes of political theory such as land religion freedom law and sovereignty are imaginatively explored by postcolonial thinkers In doing so it provides readers access to texts that add to our understanding of contemporary political life and global political dynamics

Towards a New World, 2013 The Indonesian Revolution which took place from 1945-1950 was an important event during the Cold War However the response by the Canadian government to this event has been neglected in Canadian Cold War historical analysis thus creating a gap in our understanding of Canadian Cold War decolonization policy as well as larger themes of multilateralism This study examines the place of the Indonesian Revolution as it is found within how Canada grew as an international power in the postwar period how the Canadian government's views were created or changed over the course of five years to accommodate concepts of international multilateralism and cooperation and perceived communist expansion as well as how to respond to the attempts by non Western peoples to become independent states prior to 1950
