Retired Lieutenant Colonel Andrew H. Biggs was born and raised just outside Raleigh, North Carolina. After completing the JROTC program at his high school, he enlisted in the United States Marine Corps and underwent basic training in Parris Island. Biggs distinguished himself during training and was presented the "Chesty" Puller Recruit Company Honor Graduate Award in his company.

Following basic training, Biggs was deployed to the Korean peninsula in 1980 to secure strategic locations in the fight against Communist Korean forces. While deployed, he was given command over a small regiment in the 105th Armored Infantry Unit as a special operative. Biggs' unit underwent 27 operations, and was able to successfully secure 15 key waypoints and open up key transit routes. Biggs' company was credited with 59 kills, with Biggs himself being credited with 23 of them. His contribution towards his mission led to him receiving commendations from his superiors, including a Bronze Cross for his bravery. After his 27th operation, Biggs was reassigned to the Special Rifle Division in the 33rd Ordinance, where he sent to Lungshang to combat opposing forces in the region's hot zones for two years. In that period, he was able to fulfill mission objectives tirelessly while repelling opposing forces. His dedication towards his mission led to his promotion to sergeant first class.

After his first deployment, Biggs signed on for two more tours in other parts of the Pacific theater. His superior organization of troops and resource management led to continued success in the Korean peninsula as well as with further inland progressions into the Soviet territory. By the end of his third tour, Biggs had been promoted to Lieutenant Colonel. He later served as an advisor to the Military Police branch of the United States Marine Corps. He now currently resides outside his hometown in Raleigh, and has a wife, three children, and seven grandchildren.

Autobiographical writings have been a major cultural genre from antiquity to the present time General questions of the literary as e g the relation between literature and reality truth and fiction the dependency of author narrator and figure or issues of individual and cultural styles etc can be studied preeminently in the autobiographical genre Yet the tradition of life writing has in the course of literary history developed manifold types and forms Especially in the globalized age where the media and other technological cultural factors contribute to a rapid transformation of lifestyles autobiographical writing has maintained even enhanced its popularity and importance By conceiving autobiography in a wide sense that includes memoirs diaries self portraits and autofiction as well as media transformations of the genre this three volume handbook offers a comprehensive survey of theoretical approaches systematic aspects and historical developments in an international and interdisciplinary perspective While autobiography is usually considered to be a European tradition special emphasis is placed on the modes of self representation in non Western cultures and on inter and transcultural perspectives of the genre The individual contributions are closely interconnected by a system of cross references The handbook addresses scholars of cultural and literary studies students as well as non academic readers

On Point Tracy Crow, 2015-09 Personal writing can be risky for anyone but for military veterans especially those suffering from post traumatic stress sharing stories can trigger painful and disturbing flashbacks Writing is also risky for the ego It is one thing to write a military story especially one based on authentic experiences it is quite another to muster the courage to share that story with others for critique and feedback Award winning journalist and author Tracy Crow presents a roadmap for writing an authentic persuasive military story Drawing from her personal experiences and those of other veteran writers and from the insights of noteworthy writing and teaching professionals On Point is the guide Crow wishes she d had when she first began writing about her military experience No previous writing guide specifically addresses the unique challenges and rewards facing soldiers who want to craft their military story with courage and candor

German Life Writing in the Twentieth Century Birgit Dahlke, Dennis Tate, Roger Woods, 2010. Life writing, an increasingly accepted category among scholars of literature and other disciplines, encompasses not just autobiography and biography but also memoirs, diaries, letters, interviews, and even non-written texts such as film. Whether these were produced in diary or letter form, as events unfolded or long after the event, in the form of autobiographical prose, common to all are attempts by individuals to make sense of their experiences. In many such texts, the authors reassess their lives against the background of a broader public debate about the past. This book of essays examines German life writing after major turning points in twentieth-century German history: the First World War, the Nazi era, the postwar division of Germany, and the collapse of socialism and German unification. The volume is distinctive because it combines an overview of academic approaches to the study of life writing with a set of German language case studies. In this respect, it goes further than existing studies, which often present life writing material without indicating how it might fit into our broader understanding of a particular culture or historical period. Dictionary of National Biography Leslie Stephen, Sir Sidney Lee, 1901 The Dictionary of
