

DRAWING AND PAINTING A CARICATURE

I decided to do a caricature of my friend Fashmir. I asked him to send me a few pictures , which to my surprise, he actually did !

He had sent me quite a few pictures to choose from, and I chose two of them. I decided on the ¾ view, and the one with a nice big smile. A caricature is always made to have fun, so a big smile only adds to the fun ! So , if you are ever asked to send some pictures for a caricature, make sure you smile!

Based on a few of the other pictures ,and the ¾ view here, I went for a drawing that focused on the lifted eyebrows, and the ivory smile. I drew some lines ,and show them here in big blue lines for clarity .

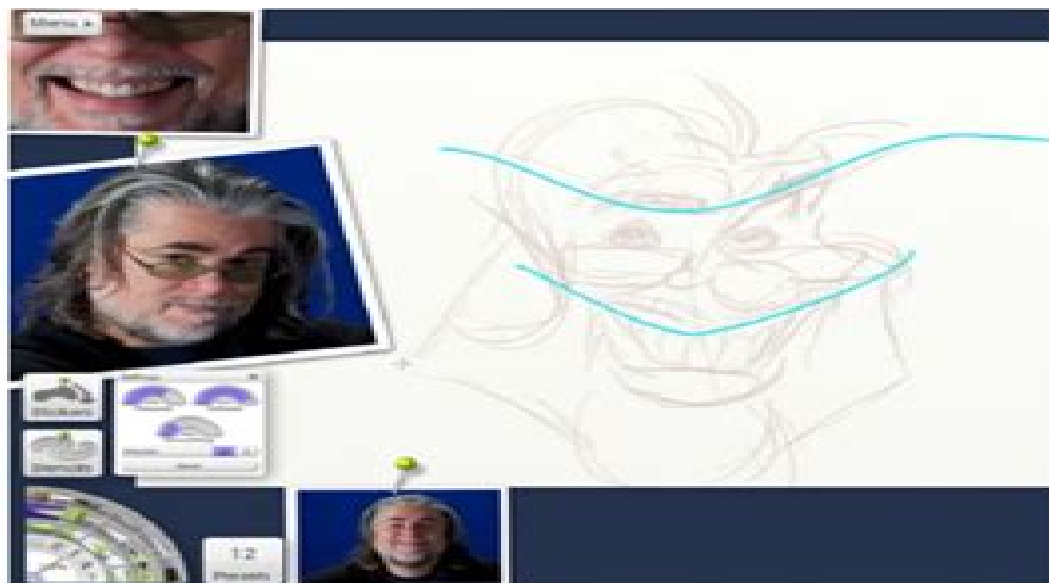

I drew a wave for the eyebrows, and a plain curve for the smile. I draped the rest of the features around this. This does require some training though. But if you are committed to doing this , it is worth it to bite the apple. Most caricaturists will say, make about 1000 drawings, and you'll start to get the hang of it.

These first lines are just a frame, there is not even a thought for a perfect line, I just make some hasty scribbles, to draw the features as I have them in my head right now. All very quick, just enough to show proportions.

I also exaggerated on the strong jaw line, and doing this I gave in on the forehead . It is all a matter of mass: take from one side, and give in from the other side.

For the hair I made sure to make some nice waving lines, to go with the lines of the eye- brows. To draw I used the pencil tool, with settings: Pressure 69%, softness 92%, and smoothing 39 %.

When doing the actual drawing, and lines become important, I will increase the smoothing amount. For now the rough lines will do just fine.
