Important Health Warning About Playing Video Games

Photosensitive seizures
A very small percentage of people may experience a seizure while playing video games, even people who have no history of seizures or epilepsy. This is an undiagnosed condition that can cause these "photosensitive" seizures while watching video games. These seizures may have a variety of symptoms, including temporary vision, eye or face twitching, jerking or shaking of arms or legs, confusion, or momentary loss of awareness. Seizures may also cause consciousness or convulsions that can lead to injury, falling from a chair, or nearby objects. Immediately stop playing and consult a doctor if you experience any of these symptoms. Parents should watch for or ask their children about these symptoms—children and teenagers are more likely than adults to experience seizures. The risk of photosensitive epileptic seizures may be reduced by following precautions: Sit farther from the screen, use a matte screen, and well-lit rooms; do not play when you are drowsy or fatigued. If you or any of your relatives have a history of seizures or epileptic seizures, consult your doctor before playing.

ESRB Game Ratings

The Entertainment Software Rating Board (ESRB) ratings are designed to help consumers, especially parents, with concise, impartial ratings about the appropriateness and content of computer and video games. The ratings help consumers make informed purchase decisions about what games to purchase for their children and families.

- ESRB ratings have two equal parts:
- Rating Symbols suggest age appropriateness for the game. They appear on the front of virtually every game box available for retail or rental in the United States and Canada.
- Content Descriptors indicate elements in a game that may have particular rating and/or may be of interest or concern. The descriptors appear on the back of the box next to the rating symbol.
