Based on the above information, the following statements are made:

- Single copy events from the LB flank identified using Probe 1 would show two hybridization bands on the Southern blot.
- Single copy events from the RB flank identified using Probe 2 would show a single hybridization band on the Southern blot.
- For true single copy events, one hybridization band would be of the same length for each of the two probes used for hybridization.
- True single copy events would show two bands each for copy number on the left border and right border flanks.
- There would be no similar hybridization band obtained using Probe 1 and Probe 2.

Which one of the following options represents only correct statements?

70) A student was asked to plot a graph representing enzyme kinetic data for initial velocity,  $v_0$ , and substrate concentration,  $[S]$  using any of the equations given below. The student used an equation for which neither X-axis nor Y-axis had independent variables. Which one of the following equations might the student have used?

any one of these three equations would work, because each of them has substrate, except the one [S], the others have  $v_0$ , all the three have and you can plot 2 using any one of these three equations, the other two as X-axis and as Y-axis in each case, so all three are the same, any of these three
