

Choices: Examining Punctuation Marks

Here's your chance to step out of the grammar book and into the real world. You may not notice punctuation marks, but you and the people around you use them every day. The following activities challenge you to find a connection between punctuation marks and the world around you. Do the activity below that suits your personality best, and then share your discoveries with your class. Have fun!

ETYMOLOGY

Just the Essentials

In this chapter you have been studying essential and nonessential phrases and clauses. What does essential really mean? Look up the word in a good dictionary, and find out its root and the original meaning of the root. Ask yourself what other words use this same root. Look up these words and their meanings. Then, prepare a poster in which you show the words growing from the root.

STUDY AIDS

Make a Connection

In order to use commas correctly, you need to be able to identify subjects, verbs, adjectives, and other elements of a sentence. Help your classmates make the connection between these grammatical elements and punctuation. Make a chart or illustration that shows how these elements function together. How you do it is up to you, but whatever you do, make the punctuation marks large enough to stand out in your illustration.

REAL LIFE

You Say Tomatoes

The end mark called a period in American English is not so named in England. What do the British call periods? Find out, and tell the class. See if you can also find out how the two terms evolved.

TECHNOLOGY

Dot Com

You've probably heard dot, not period, when people refer to Internet addresses. If you surf the Net, explain to your classmates why the Net uses dot instead of period. Explain the function of dots on the Internet, and show how they are used.

WRITING

To Each His or Her Own

Give your classmates a chance to use colons. Prepare a handout. Your handout will be a questionnaire, but it won't have questions. Instead, you'll write incomplete sentences. To be completed, each sentence will require a series, such as "My favorite three people are as follows: _____" or "Three things that I love to eat are _____." Each student must decide whether or not to insert a colon before he or she finishes filling in each blank. Notice that not all of your sentences need to use colons. Be sure to use several methods of introducing a series. Check your textbook for details. Let your classmates keep your questionnaire to put into their journals.

ART

All Your Ducks in a Row

On notebook-sized paper, draw a giant semi-colon or colon. Inside the mark, write the rules that apply to it and an example for each rule. Don't stop now! Make your illustration look sharp! How? Use colors and different-sized markers or pens, and maybe add a smaller drawing or two.

CREATIVE WRITING

My Secret Life

Write a journal entry for a semicolon. Consider the following possibilities. Is it possible that semicolons have psychological problems? After all, their name implies they are only half a thing. Perhaps they labor under a feeling of inferiority. It's possible that they try to make themselves feel better by exerting their power over defenseless independent clauses. What do you say? Be as creative as you can in your journal entry.
