- Sealant bead thickness: 3.7 mm
- Sealant diameter: 3.7 mm

Cylinder Bore to Cylinder Liner With Dist Damage

Traces of scoring by burning are only just visible or are no longer visible. If the trace is substantial, then a ridge can be felt at the vertical point of the first piston ring.

Dist and particulate damage are caused by poor sealing, cracks and oil and soot. Carefully inspect all cylinder bores, valves and liners, even a performing piston and associated components.

Sealant as Cylinder Liner With Dist Damage

At sealing surfaces and transitions between the oil pan and crankcase, it is particularly important to pay attention to cleanliness. The sealing surface must be oil and grease free otherwise leaks can occur.

① The uppermost face (A) shows the sealant path.

Apply sealant evenly in the form of a bead with a height and width of 3.7 mm (x 3.7 mm) on the face (A) of the timing case cover. The sealant must be applied within 10 min.

The sealant must be applied in the upper area of the timing case cover in the center area of the sealing surface because the sealant is distributed downwards due to placement of the timing case cover.
