 have Her parents have told her that she should end her relationship with David It isn t that David has a dubious character no he is an upstanding member of society He is a school teacher He is older than her He is a widower with adult children And he has just asked her to marry him The problem is exacerbated because Eleanor believes that children should obey their parents When is a child not a child Is it a lifetime principle or are their circumstances where the rule is subjugated to a higher principle Apart from that there are the normal human emotions to cope with In going against their wishes she also risks losing her parents What about David s parents What about his children What about her school What about higher education What about having a family With David s help and support she overcomes the hurdles one by one But still her father won t speak to her Will they ever be reconciled This is the sequel to David Makes A Decision and follows the problems that beset Eleanor after she gives her answer to David If you haven t read that then stop right now This begins with that decision
