

Report

A report is an informative formal piece of writing concerning a particular person, place, situation, plan, etc.

It is slightly different to an essay in the sense that it is a far more formal and professional way of conducting an analysis of your topic.

statement of the results of an investigation or of any matter on which definite information is required – Oxford English Dictionary

Types of Report

Laboratory report	This type of report conveys and analyzes the results of a scientific experiment.
Business report	This analyzes a situation and uses business theory to provide solutions or recommendations.
Case study report	This examines a real-world situation (the 'case') and analyzes it using appropriate theory (the 'study').
Project report	This briefly discusses project's objectives, budget, & outcomes.
Research report	this gives the results of research which has been conducted, for example through surveys (via questionnaires or interviews).
Progress report	This informs a supervisor about progress on a project over a certain period of time.
Design report	This report is used by engineers and describes and evaluates a design used to solve a particular problem.
Field Report	Phenomena under study

These reports are used so that:

- New ideas can be realized
- Point-of-view can be known and learned to be accepted
- Decisions can be made to help influence people's choice
- Alternative recommendations become available in crucial decision-making
