Fine Structure Immunocytochemistry Gareth Griffiths,2012-12-06 Electron microscopy in the biological sciences can be divided into two disciplines The first concerned with high resolution detail of particles or periodic structures is mostly based on sound theoretical principles of physics The second by far the larger discipline is interested in the information obtainable from thin sections The theoretical back ground to those groups of techniques for preparing and looking at thin sections is often inexact and loose for want of a better word What should be chemistry is often closer to alchemy This kind of electron microscopy is often enshrined with mystical recipes handed down from generation to generation Admittedly many of the processes involved such as those required to embed tissue in epoxy resins involve multiple interconnected steps which make it difficult to follow the details of anyone of these steps If all these steps are shrouded in some mystery however can one really trust the final image that emerges on the EM screen When we present the data in some semi quantitative form is there really no better way to do it than to categorize the parameters with etc What happens when one labels the sections with antibodies Does the whole business necessarily need to be more of an art than a science Upon reflecting on these problems in 1981 I had the impression that many of the multi authored textbooks that existed then and that have appeared since tended to exacerbate or at least perpetuate this      The Wood-worker ,1908      Records of the Past ,1911      The Iron Age ,1906      Veneers and Plywood ,1929      Pits and Boots: Excavation of Medieval and Post-medieval Backlands under the Bon Accord Centre, Aberdeen Michael Roy,2021-05-13 Excavations in 2007 8 ahead of an extension to the Bon Accord Centre in Aberdeen uncovered backlands that would have formed part of the industrial quarter of the medieval town The excavation charts the changing nature of the area from an industrial zone in the medieval period to horticultural and domestic spaces in post medieval times      Berlin Quality P.B.
