

Activity: Human Homologous Chromosomes

Background: A human Somatic (body) cell has 23 pairs of chromosomes in its nucleus. Each pair of Autosome chromosomes is Homologous meaning they have a matching size, shape and gene location. One member of each pair is from the person's father ♂. The other member is from the mother ♀. The only pair of chromosomes that is not necessarily made of a matching homologous is the pair of sex chromosomes. A human female has two homologous X chromosomes but, a human male has an un-matching pair made up of an X chromosome and a Y chromosome.

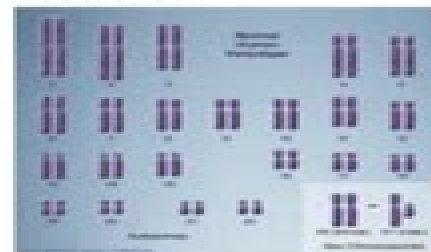

Objective: Prepare a karyotype of human chromosomes.

Materials: paper scissors pencil glue

Procedure:

- Figure 1 shows 46 chromosomes from a human body cell. Note that 23rd sex chromosome pair shows examples for both male and female.
- Use the Cut and Paste Karyotyping Activity sheet (page 2) to carefully cut out each numbered chromosome with its identifying letter or number.
 - Place each numbered chromosome in the corresponding numbered box in the Chart 1 (page 3).
 - Carefully glue each chromosome in place.
- Cut out the unnumbered chromosomes located in the box on the Cut and Paste Karyotype Activity (page 2).
 - Match each unnumbered chromosome to its homologous chromosome and glue next to the homologous chromosome in the proper box of Chart 1.
- The last unmatched chromosome is the sex chromosome number 23.
 - Glue the sex chromosome in box number 23.
 - Answer the question as to whether the karyotype of a human male or female in the final box of Chart 1.
- Complete the following conclusion questions below.
