CORROSION PREVENTION

PART I - GENERAL INFORMATION

CORROSION REMOVAL TECHNIQUES
PROCEDURE AFTER ACID SPILLS

1. General

- A. Acid spills, unless neutralized, can rapidly corrode metallic structure.
- B. The primary source of acid spillage is in the battery compartments where acid electrolytes may overflow during charging or spill during battery servicing.
- C. Acid-based corrosion removal compounds and airplane cleaners are used quite extensively during routine maintenance and repair. Spills do occur at times and thorough neutralizing and/or rinsing is necessary to preclude corrosion damage.
- D. Containers of acid concentrates or acid based chemicals may be part of a cargo and may be broken during loading or unloading. Spillage from such sources are usually larger in scale than battery electrolyte or maintenance servicing chemical spills mentioned in par. B and C. It is, therefore, advisable that the acid spillage be neutralized as soon as possible.
- E. Operators should also be cognizant of the fact that acids may deteriorate nonmetallic materials such as fabrics, wood, leather, etc.
- F. The FAA has required the removal of all lithium sulfur dioxide batteries from all U.S. civil aircraft. This is due to the fact that many incidents have been reported in which lithium sulfur dioxide batteries have burned or vented violently. Some batteries have also leaked sulfur dioxide gas, which combines with moisture to form extremely corrosive sulfuric acid.

2. Detection

- A. Any discoloration on the surface should be suspected and investigated. Black, white, yellow and brown are predominant chemical reaction precipitate colors. Precipitate colors depend on the acid and the material on which the acid is spilled.
