- NOTE: The standard deviation and mean for the change in weight (kg) in the setting of the 12-month longitudinal study were 1.07 and 1.04, respectively. The mean change in weight for the 12-month longitudinal study was 1.04 kg, which is the same as the mean change in weight for the 24-month longitudinal study.

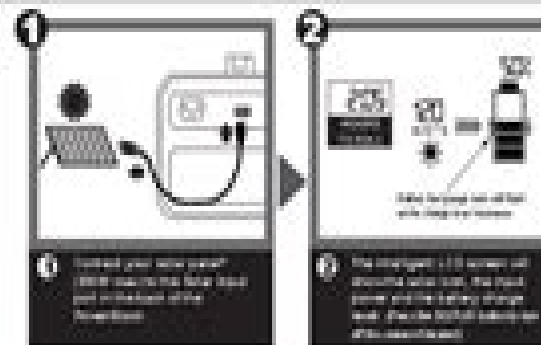

Abstract

There is a growing body of research suggesting that the use of technology in the classroom can enhance student learning. This research is based on the idea that technology can provide students with access to a wide range of resources, including interactive simulations, multimedia presentations, and online databases. By using technology, teachers can create a more engaging and personalized learning environment for their students. This can lead to improved student motivation, participation, and achievement. Additionally, technology can help teachers to track student progress and identify areas where students may need additional support. Overall, the use of technology in the classroom is a promising approach to improving student learning outcomes.
