

Clinical psychology notes

Clinical psychology – involves using clinical judgement to apply scientific knowledge from the discipline of clinical psychology in clinical practice with clients & patients.

What is a clinical psychologist:

- 1) A research-oriented scientist-practitioner – bound by quantitivism & rules – needs to be effective.
- 2) A practice-oriented practitioner scholar – more of a therapist – they're engaging/learning by doing = it's vocational.
- 3) A reflective practitioner – more of a counsellor type

What should a clinical psychologist do? – They're judged on what research they know, NOT what they do & how they apply it in a scientific manner.

- 1) Assessments – some questions / case notes / medical history / practitioner experience / opinions (following a consistent model of practice & formulating an opinion based on the assessment).
- 2) Diagnosis
- 3) Prescribe drugs – e.g. depression = anti-depressants.
- 4) Formulation – process of decision making – you create some kind of reasoning for why the person has that problem – from that reason, intervention = created
- 5) Interventions / therapy.

- ↳ Clinical judgement – developed through supervised clinical practice while undertaking professional training & accumulated clinical practice.
- ↳ Clinical practice – assessment, treatment & prevention of psychological problems.
- ↳ Scientific knowledge – developed through initial academic training, continual professional development (CPD) & training – read about research.
