Riedel, 2012-12-06 Knowledge based systems are increasingly found in a wide variety of settings and this handbook has been written to meet a specific need in their widening use While there have been many successful applications of knowledge based systems some applications have failed because they never received the corrective feedback that evaluation provides for keeping development focused on the users needs in their actual working environment This handbook provides a conceptual framework and compendium of methods for performing evaluations of knowledge based systems during their development Its focus is on the users and subject matter experts evaluation of the usefulness of the system and not on the developers testing of the adequacy of the programming code The handbook permits evaluators to systematically answer the following kinds of questions Does the knowledge based system meet the users task requirements Is the system easy to use Is the knowledge base logically consistent Does it meet the required level of expertise Does the system improve performance The authors have produced a handbook that will serve two audiences a tool that can be used to create knowledge based systems practitioners developers and evaluators and a framework that will stimulate more research in the area academic researchers and students To accomplish this the handbook is built around a conceptual framework that integrates the different types of evaluations into the system of development process The kinds of questions that can be answered and the methods available for answering them will change throughout the system development life cycle And throughout this process one needs to know what can be done and what can't It is this dichotomy that addresses needs in both the practitioner and academic research

1 INTRODUCTION These proceedings are the result of a conference on Automating Systems Development held at Leicester Polytechnic England on 14 to 16 April 1987 The conference was attended by over 170 delegates from industry and academia and it represents a comprehensive review of the state of the art of the use of the computer based tools for the analysis design and construction of Information Systems IS Two parallel streams ran throughout the conference The academic or research papers were the fruit of British European and Canadian research with some of the papers reflecting UK Government funded Alvey or European ESPRIT research projects Two important touchstones guided the selection of academic papers Firstly they should be primarily concerned with system rather than program development Secondly they should be easily accessible to delegates and readers We felt that formal mathematical papers had plenty of other opportunities for airing and publication The second stream was the applied programme a set of formal presentations given by leading software vendors and consultancies It is clear that many advances in systems development are actually applied rather than research led Thus it was important for delegates to hear how leading edge companies view the State of the Art This was supported by a small exhibition area where certain vendors demonstrated the software they had introduced in the formal presentation The Information Systems Development
