Control Valve to Close

This image shows the same control valve in a closed position. The large, dark, circular disc is now fully closed, blocking the flow path. The valve is still connected to the same rusted metal pipe. The background shows the same mechanical components and blue pipe as in the previous image.
