

Journey Towards Basic Education Curricular Reforms: 1946 - 2001

1946- 1956

The establishment of the Commonwealth, called for reorientation of educational plans and policies to conform to the requirements of a revised form of government. The 1935 Constitution provided certain educational objectives such as the development of moral character, personal discipline, civic conscience, vocational efficiency and citizenship training..

To carry out the Constitutional mandate a revision of the elementary curriculum was made to include the teaching of the National Language obligatory. It was offered as a subject in 1939-1940 in the public

Curricular Reforms Guide Schools But Where To:

Developing National Standards in Education Diane Ravitch, 1995 The Strong State and Curriculum Reform Leonel Lim, Michael W. Apple, 2016-04-20 As Asian education systems increasingly take on a stronger presence on the global educational landscape of special interest is an understanding of the ways in which many of these states direct their schools towards higher achievement What is missing however are accounts that take seriously the particular construction of the strong developmental state witnessed across many Asian societies and that seek to understand the politics and possibilities of curriculum change vis a vis precisely the dominance of such a state By engaging in analyses based on some of the best current social and cultural theories and by illuminating the interactions among various state and non state pedagogic agents the chapters in this volume account for the complex post colonial historical and cultural consciousnesses that many Asian states and societies experience At a time when much of the educational politics in Asia remains in a state of transition and as many of these states seek out through the curriculum new forms of social control and novel bases of political legitimacy such a volume offers enduring insights into the real if not also always relative autonomy that schools and communities maintain in countering the hegemonic presence of strong states

Theorizing Teaching and Learning in Asia and Europe John Chi-Kin Lee, Kerry J. Kennedy, 2017-03-27 There has been much debate in recent times between the

Anglo American tradition of curriculum studies and the Continental and North European tradition of didactics Didaktik As important as such debate has been this book seeks to add new voices to the debate representing ideas and traditions from a different part of the world The focus is on Chinese curriculum thinking that has passed through a number of stages and currently represents a blend of some aspects of the American tradition and Chinese cultural traditions How does Chinese thinking about curriculum teaching and learning resonate with European didactic traditions and what are the implications for theorizing an expanded field of curriculum studies This book deliberately transcends borders and cultures to explore new territory to provide a platform for open dialogue and to open up new areas of investigation Chapters include Curriculum Reform and Research in China A Social Historical Perspective What Mathematics Did Teachers Learn Comparison of the School and the Pre Service Teacher Mathematics Curricula in Germany and Taiwan Living in Parallel Worlds A Transatlantic Dialogue between General Didactics and Instructional Design Curriculum Innovations in Changing Societies K. Parish, 1997 First Published in 1998 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company How State Education Reform Can Improve Secondary Schools Allan Odden, 1987 The Politics of Curriculum and Testing Susan Fuhrman, Betty Malen, 1991 Identifies prominent patterns that both policy researchers and policy makers may wish to consider The book addresses aspects of curriculum testing and accountability policies and employs different analytical perspectives School Reform, Corporate Style Dorothy Shipps, 2006 Like other big city school systems Chicago s has been repeatedly reformed over the last century Yet its schools have fallen far short of citizens expectations and left a gap between the performances of white and minority students Many blame the educational establishment for resisting change Other critics argue that reform occurs too often still others claim it comes not often enough Dorothy Shipps reappraises the tumultuous history of educational progress in Chicago revealing that the persistent lack of improvement is due not to the extent but rather the type of reform Throughout the twentieth century managerial reorganizations initiated by the business community repeatedly altered the governance structure of schools as well as the relationships of teachers to children and parents but brought little improvement while other more promising reform models were either resisted or crowded out Shipps chronicles how Chicago's corporate actors led abetted or restrained nearly every attempt to transform the city's school system then asks whether schools might be better reformed by others To show why city schools have failed urban children so badly she traces Chicago's reform history over four political eras revealing how corporate power was instrumental in designing and revamping the system Her narrative encompasses the formative era of 1880-1930 when teachers unions moderated business plans previously unexplored business activism from 1930 to 1980 when civil rights dominated school reform and the decentralization of the 1980s She also covers the uneasy cooperation among business associations in the 1990s to install the mayor as head of the school system a governing regime now challenged by privatization advocates Business people may be too wedded to a stunted view of educators to forge a productive partnership for change Unionized teachers bridle at the second class status accorded them by managers If reform is to reach deeply into classrooms Shipps concludes it might well require a new coalition of teachers unions and parents to create a fresh agenda that supersedes corporate interests This study clearly shows that in Chicago as elsewhere urban schooling is intertwined with politics and power By reviewing more than a century of corporate efforts to make education work Shipps makes a strong case that it's high time to look elsewhere perhaps to educators themselves for new leadership
