

Paper 3: Vietnam Section Question 3 Model Answers

Source A: General Westmoreland, who commanded the US forces in Vietnam until 1968, gave his views on the US media in 1979

"Actions by opponents of the war in the United States were supported by the news media. The media, no doubt, helped to back up the message that the war was 'illegal' and 'immoral'. Then came the enemy's Tet Offensive of early 1968. The North Vietnamese and Vietcong sugared a military defeat. Despite this, reporting of the offensive by the press and television in the USA gave the impression of an endless war that could never be won.

Source B: From Selected Writings, Ho Chi Minh, published in 1977. He explains the use of guerrilla tactics.

"When fighting in an enemy-occupied area, we must use guerrilla tactics. We must absolutely not go in for large-scale battles and big victories unless we are certain of success. The aim of guerrilla warfare is to nibble at the enemy, harass him in such a way that he can neither eat nor sleep in peace, to allow him no rest, to wear him out physically and mentally, and finally to annihilate him. Wherever he goes, he should be attacked by our guerrillas, stumble on land mines or be greeted by sniper fire."

Interpretation 1: From Rise and Fall of the Great Powers, P Kennedy, published in 1988

"Economically, the USA was 50 to 100 times more productive than North Vietnam. Militarily, it had the firepower to bomb the enemy back into the Stone Age. But this was not a war in which that superiority could be made effective. Fighting was reduced to a series of small-scale encounters in jungles and paddy fields. Moreover, the North Vietnamese and Vietcong were fighting for what they believed very strongly. The South Vietnamese government, by contrast, appeared corrupt and unpopular."

Interpretation 2: From Access to History Context: An Introduction to American History 1860-1990, A. Farmer and V Sanders, published in 2002

"Some Americans, especially Vietnam War veterans, blame unsympathetic media coverage for the United States' failure to win in Vietnam. Initially the media were pro war. However, as the lack of progress became evident to reporters in Vietnam, the media began to turn against the war. Tet accelerated that process. While the media did not cover Communist atrocities, reporters saw enough of South Vietnam to know there was something wrong with the Saigon regime and that American policy in supporting it was not always admirable"

Question 3(a)

How useful are sources B and C for an enquiry into why America was forced to withdraw from the Vietnam War?

Explain your answer using source B and C and your knowledge of the historical context. (8 marks)

Source B is useful for an enquiry in explaining why America was forced to withdraw from Vietnam because it shows the importance of the media in helping to persuade the American public that they should withdraw from the war. Source B shows this when it says that the actions of the opponents of the war were "supported by the media". This is best shown in the reporting of the Tet Offensive when the media really started to question whether or not the US were really the "good guys" in the
