Climate Change and Coastal Risk Management Project Deidre Wilson, 2009 Managing Climate Risks in Coastal Communities Lawrence Susskind, Danya Rumore, Carri Hulet, Patrick Field, 2015-09-15 Drawing on research from the New England Climate Adaptation Project Managing Climate Risks for Coastal Communities introduces a framework for building local capacity to respond to climate change The authors maintain that local climate adaptation efforts require collective commitments to risk management but that many communities are not ready to take on the challenge and urgently need enhanced capacity to support climate adaptation planning To this end the book offers statistical assessments of one readiness enhancement strategy using tailored role play simulations as part of a broader engagement approach It also introduces methods for forecasting local climate change risks as well as for evaluating the social and political context in which collective action must take place With extensive illustration and example engagement materials this volume is tailored for use by researchers policy makers and practitioners Sustainable Coastal Management and Climate Adaptation David Wood,2012-10-03 Explores evolution of coastal management provides critical insights into contemporary experience understanding of coastal management in Australia Draws on contemporary theory lessons from case examples to highlight roles of research community engagement in coastal management Wood and Stocker at Curtin University Climate Change and Disaster Risk Management Walter Leal Filho,2012-08-10 There has been some degree of reluctance in the past to consider disaster risk management within the mainstream of adaptation to climate variability and climate change However there is now wide recognition of the need to incorporate disaster risk management concerns in dealing with such phenomena There is also a growing awareness of the necessity for a multi sectoral approach in managing the effects of climate variability and climate change since this can lead to a significant reduction of risk This book presents the latest findings from scientific research on climate variation climate change and their links with disaster risk management It showcases projects and other initiatives in this field that are being undertaken in both industrialised and developing countries by universities and scientific institutions government bodies national and international agencies NGOs and other stakeholders Finally it discusses current and future challenges identifying opportunities and highlighting the still unrealised potential for promoting better understanding of the connections between climate variation climate change and disaster risk management worldwide

Bowman, 2009 At present more than 50% of the entire world population lives in cities According to the United Nations more than two thirds of the world s large cities are vulnerable to rising sea levels exposing millions of people to the risk of extreme floods and storms Within the coming 30 years the United Nations project that the number of people living in cities will increase to 60% of the world s population resulting in even more people living in highly exposed areas Both scientists and policy makers have addressed the issue of adapting to the challenge of climate change and both call for embedding long term scenarios in city planning and investments in all sectors Based on estimations of costs of estimations it appears that investing in adaptation now would save money in the long term This book shows the different aspects of climate adaptation It is an independent investigation of comparative adaptation problems and progress in the cities of Rotterdam New York and Jakarta In this regard each city faces different challenges one of the lessons of the Connecting Delta Cities initiative is that while cities will follow adaptation paths that may differ sometimes substantially each city can learn from the others Climate Change, Coasts and Coastal Risk Roshanka Ranasinghe, Ruben Jongejan, 2018 The combination of coastal climate change impacts and their effects on the ever increasing human utilization of the coastal zone will invariably result in increasing coastal risk in the coming decades However while economic damage potential consequence caused by climate change driven coastal inundation and erosion potential hazard is likely to increase foregoing land use opportunities in coastal regions and protecting or nourishing coasts is also costly Managing the risk of coastline recession is therefore a balancing act To avoid unacceptable future risks it is imperative that risk informed and sustainable coastal planning management strategies are implemented sooner rather than later This requires the development of methods for comprehensive coastal risk assessments which combine state of the art consequence or damage modeling and coastal hazard modeling This Special Issue contains 13 papers aimed at addressing this challenge Responding to Rising Seas OECD Country Approaches to Tackling Coastal Risks OECD, 2019-03-06 There is an urgent need to ensure that coastal areas are adapting to the impacts of climate change Risks in these areas are projected to increase because of rising sea levels and development pressures This report reviews how OECD countries can use their national adaptation planning processes Proceedings New Zealand Geographical Society.
