Kayla's story

Kayla is 14 and registers for an account on Social, a new social media platform that her friends are using. She signs up and provides her name, age, gender and email address.

On the way to school she uploads a selfie and tags her friends to let them know that she has a Social account now. When at school, Kayla notices that the photo has been automatically tagged with her location. By the time she has reached school, the photo has lots of likes, including from people she doesn't know.

After school, Kayla follows her favourite influencer, who has a new post published with a tagged friend. Kayla clicks on the picture and is taken to the brand's website.

Over the next few days Kayla keeps receiving lots of advice for better followers.

Kayla needs to get a big piece of work done for school, so she decides to take a break from Social. That evening she receives a notification from the app saying, "We have missed you on Social. Check out what your friends have posted today!"

She clicks on the app's privacy policy to understand how it's using her personal data but it's really long and complicated, so she gives up.
