

Study Guide: Classification and the Kingdoms

Carolus Linnaeus was a Swedish botanist and physician, and founded the science of taxonomy in the 1700's.

Taxonomy: is the science of identifying, classifying and naming of organisms. Linnaeus came up with the system of binomial nomenclature; the two part naming system that gives scientific names to organisms. There can be many common names for an organism but there is only one scientific name for an organism. The scientific name is made up of the organisms Genus and species name. For example a dog can have many common names such as; puppy, pooch, pup dog, doggy but it only has one scientific name Canis lupus. Its genus name is Canis and its species name is lupus. Canis lupus contains only one species. The genus name is capitalized and the species is lowercase. The name should also be either italicized or underlined.

Why do scientists classify organisms? Scientists put organisms in organized groups based on their similarities and differences to understand evolutionary relationships between organisms and to be able to communicate with each other about organisms.

How do scientists classify things?

Scientists use dichotomous keys to identify organisms. Dichotomous keys include descriptive statements and depending on the answer to each statement you can identify an unknown organism. We worked on these in class, and most of you even made your own!

8 Levels of Classification

Scientists classify organisms into 8 levels of classification.

Domain - largest level: contains the most organisms

Kingdom

Phylum

Class

Order

Family

Genus

Species most specific level contains one organism

There are three domains:

Archaea - includes all archaeobacteria

Bacteria - includes all eubacteria

Eukarya - includes animals, plants, protists, fungi

*We can use pneumonic, such as: Did King Phillip Came Over For Grape Soda? to remember the 8 levels of classification.

Scientists place organisms in the kingdom they belong by looking at several characteristics:

1. If the organism has prokaryotic or eukaryotic cells: If the cells in the organism do not have a nucleus, then that organism has prokaryotic cells. If the cells in an organism have a nucleus then the organism has eukaryotic cells.
2. If the organism is a producer, consumer or decomposer: does this organism make its own food (producer), does it feed on other organisms (consumer) or does it feed off of dead organisms (decomposer)?
3. If the organism is unicellular or multicellular: Is the organism single celled or is it many celled?
