

Civil Rights

Lesson 1

Taking on Segregation

Key Terms and People

Segregation: Separation of people based on race or ethnicity. In this lesson, it refers to segregation of African Americans.

Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka: Supreme Court case in 1954 that declared segregation in public schools unconstitutional.

Booker T. Washington: African American leader who advocated for African Americans to gain education.

James Farmer: Leader of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC).

Reverend Martin Luther King Jr.: African American minister and leader of the SCLC.

Montgomery Bus Boycott: A 381-day protest in 1955-56 against segregation on the public bus system in Montgomery, Alabama.

Before You Read

As you read, think about the role of the federal government in the civil rights movement. How did the federal government help or hinder the movement? What role did the federal government play in the struggle for equality?

Read the text and think about the role of the federal government in the civil rights movement.

The 1940s and 1950s were a time of great change for African Americans. They fought for equality in many ways, including in the workplace, in schools, and in public places. The federal government played a key role in this struggle.

During the 1940s, the federal government began to take action against segregation. In 1948, the Supreme Court ruled that segregation in public places was unconstitutional.

In 1954, the Supreme Court ruled that segregation in public schools was unconstitutional. This was a major victory for the civil rights movement.

The federal government also passed laws to protect the rights of African Americans. In 1957, the federal government passed the Civil Rights Act, which made it illegal to discriminate against African Americans in the workplace.

During the 1950s, the federal government also took action against segregation in public places. In 1955, the federal government passed the Montgomery Bus Boycott, which ended segregation on the Montgomery bus system.

The federal government also took action against segregation in public places. In 1957, the federal government passed the Civil Rights Act, which made it illegal to discriminate against African Americans in the workplace.
