Genetics Joins Evolutionary Theory

Genetics Joins Evolutionary Theory

Gregor Mendel's experiments with pea plants demonstrated segregation.

- 1. Mendel's experiments demonstrated that traits are controlled by genes and that these genes behave in predictable ways when alleles are combined. This combination of different alleles is an individual's genotype. Genes that code for an offspring's sex and genotype.
- 2. Genes are passed on from one generation to the next. Individuals of a population share a common group of genes, called a gene pool.
- 3. Allele frequency: is the number of copies of an allele present in a gene pool. Allele frequencies can change over time when alleles are inherited by parents, passed on to offspring, and then passed on to the next generation.

Examples of Genetic Variation Variation can be caused by genetic recombination, mutation, gene flow, and natural selection.

- 1. Genetic variation is any change in the sequence of DNA.
- 2. Genetic variation can be caused by mutation, which is a change in the sequence of DNA. This can be caused by errors in DNA replication or by exposure to mutagenic agents. Genetic variation can be a source of new alleles in a population.
- 3. Genetic variation can be caused by recombination of genes from two different parents. This can be caused by crossing over during meiosis.

Single Gene and Polygenic Traits Mendel's experiments with pea plants demonstrated that single gene traits are controlled by one gene.

- 1. Single gene traits are controlled by one gene. An example is pea plant height, which is controlled by one gene.
- 2. Polygenic traits are controlled by two or more genes. An example is human skin color, which is controlled by two or more genes.
