

Chapter 4: COMFORT AND DESIGN STRATEGIES

Summary

This chapter presents the concept of thermal comfort, an introduction to climate issues and analysis, and the role of buildings as a mediator between climate and comfort. A building is one of three layers that separate our deep body temperature from the conditions in the external environment; our skin and clothing are the other two layers.

Metabolism, changing in magnitude with activity level, generates heat that must be dissipated to the environment for us to remain healthy and comfortable. A number of bodily response mechanisms regulate the flow of heat from the body core to the skin surface. Heat transfer from the skin to the environment can occur via conduction, convection, radiation, and evaporation. Clothing acts as a mediator between the body and the thermal environment.

Thermal comfort is defined as a “feeling of [thermal] well-being” that can be affected by physical (both personal and environmental) and psychological factors. The importance of psychological factors to building design is emphasized. Physical environmental factors include: air temperature, air motion, relative humidity, and surface temperatures (or radiation). Localized comfort effects are described. ASHRAE comfort recommendations (via Standard 55-2004) are reviewed, with a caution that they tend to downplay the psychological factors. Comfort standards (bioclimatic) that may be more applicable to the design of passive buildings are introduced. These standards begin to draw a link between comfort and climate.

Climate is presented as the character of the ambient thermal environment into which a building is placed. Analysis of climate can provide a valuable tool for building design—suggesting how and when a building should modify naturally occurring conditions. Olgyay’s timetables of climatic needs are presented and discussed. Basic design strategies for passive cooling and heating are introduced and linked to climate analysis. Passive cooling strategies include: natural ventilation, high-mass construction, high-mass with night ventilation, and evaporative cooling. Passive heating strategies include: direct gain, indirect gain, and isolated gain approaches. Combined heating and cooling strategies—including daylighting as a valuable adjunct to thermal scheming—are discussed in general terms. Visual and acoustical comfort are noted as being much less holistically developed areas of design than thermal comfort.
