Real GDP and per capita GDP are both measures of the level of economic activity in the economy. Real GDP is the total value of goods and services produced in the economy. Real GDP per person is the total value of goods and services produced in the economy divided by the total population. Real GDP per worker is the total value of goods and services produced in the economy divided by the total number of workers. The graph shows that Real GDP is growing faster than Real GDP per person, which is growing faster than Real GDP per worker. This is because the population is growing faster than the number of workers.
