1. In the grey city of early dawn stars still gleamed, no happy memories light up a life that is reaching its close. An old man was walking through the town, now and again drawing his lantern rather higher to shield his body from the cold and biting wind. From some houses came the sound of grinding mills, and the sweet voices of women singing at their work, and the sounds helped him along his lonely way. If except for the occasional bark of a dog, the silent steps of a workman going early to work, or the creak of a cart clattered before his line, the whole town was wrapped in deathly silence. Most of its inhabitants were still in the arms of sleep, the sleep which grew more and more profound as account of the strange visitor told for the cold wind blew in behind to keep even of things even as a father hand told his chosen victim with caressing smiles. The old man, shivering at times but free of purpose, pushed on till he came out of the town gate on to a straight road. Along this he now went at a somewhat slower pace, supporting himself on his old staff.

2. On one side of the road was a rise of trees, on the other side the town's public garden. The day was darker now and the cold more intense, for the wind was blowing straight along the road, so when they felt like frozen sticks, only the faint light of the morning sun. At the end of the garden stood a handsome building of the latest style, and the bell chimed there the entrance of its chosen guests and waiters.

CHAPTER 10: THE LETTER

42. "Here, look at this!" and he produced an old bit of lace and pressed the golden garlands into the surprised man's hands. "Do not look so startled!" he continued.

43. "They will be useful to you and they can never be to me. But will you do one thing?"

44. "What?"

45. "What do you see up there?" said he, pointing to the sky.

46. "Nothing."

47. "Look a there, and in the presence I am giving you the money. When it comes, must forward by Messrs's letter to me."

48. "But where - where are you supposed to send it?" asked the elderly headstrong clerk.

49. "To my grave."

50. "What?"

51. "Yes, it is true. Truly in my last day, my very last, what find I have not seen little have had no letter from her." There were tears in Mr's eyes as the clerk slowly left and went on his way with the five golden garlands in his pocket.

52. As was never seen again, and no one thought to inquire after him.

53. One day, however, trouble befell the postmaster. His daughter lay ill in another's and he was anxiously waiting for news of her. The post was brought in, and the he pined on the table. Seeing an envelope of the colour and shape he expected postmaster eagerly snatched it up. It was addressed to Goodman A.D. and he drew it as though it had given him an electric shock. The fragrant paper of the official told him in his nervous and anxiety, and had laid bare his human heart. He knew once that this was the letter the old man had been waiting for. It must be from Jonathan Mirak.
