

The Education of an Automobilst.

A MAN buys an auto just as he formerly bought a buggy. The first time a man buys a buggy he buys a cheap one, because price is the only thing he understands about buggies. After he has had some experience, quality comes before price, and nothing but the highest grade carriage will satisfy him after that.

So the automobilist learns by experience. He buys cheap cars because cheap cars are cheap, and because automobile quality is an unknown quantity. When he has learned the rest, he insists on the best. Then Pierce quality begins to talk to him.

Such a man must read "A Tale of Triumph," which tells all the actual experience of the three Pierce cars in the most memorable long-distance endurance run of the century. The book is free on request. The man who reads it must be convinced.
