

SERVICE QUALITY AND CUSTOMER SATISFACTION ISSUES IN FRONT OFFICE BUSINESSES

¹Dr. Muthanna Alobaidi

ABSTRACT—This study is aimed to explore customer satisfaction of the Crystal Grand Hotel Ishtar hotel toward its front office services quality to assist Crystal Grand Hotel Ishtar hoteliers in formulating customized operations and strategies which will enhance their ability to perform the promised service to guests. A survey questionnaire was conducted and an equation of multiple regressions was used. Five hotel service quality dimensions were identified and four of them were important influential factors in determining guests' overall satisfaction levels toward front office services as well as hotel services.

Keywords-- Front office, service quality, Servqual, Customer satisfaction

I. INTRODUCTION

The expected increasing in the numbers of travelers in the coming twenty years and the recent global economic recession which is impose hotels' managements continuously to improve their service in order to meet the expectations of their customers and even goes beyond. As Shishavi (2007) stated, in order to improve service quality, the hotel industry needs to know which service attributes might affect choice intention of customers. Failure to give necessary attention to those attributes might result in a customer's negative evaluation of the hotel services and may ruin the chance of that guest returning to the hotel. Juraabeer (2004) asserted that the major concern of nowadays business is the provision of quality customer, due to the fact that a customer's satisfaction is influenced by the availability of customer services.

In Iraq to day, due to substantial changes which affected most of life's aspects of peoples, life style, culture, and values the hotel guests now looking for excellency to satisfy their needs and the hotels have increased their competition and now instead of having only a nice room to draw customers in, they offer -high quality staff as an amenity as well.

In the hotel industry, staff is ranging from top management staff to front line staff (i.e. housekeepers, receptionists, front cashiers). Front office staff is considered a supporting factor in determining customer satisfaction when deciding to return, to recommend the hotel, or in demonstrating loyalty to a particular hotel. In addition, the front office is an important function because customers deal with front office staff as the center of the hotel. They provide assistance to guests, fulfill their needs, and meet their wants. Thus, front office staff are the nerve center of all hotels, and the front office is essential to keep up with what is happening at all areas of the hotels (Sriyam, 2010). According to what we discussed above this has prompted the importance of service quality
