

A Curricular Plan for the Writing Workshop
By Lucy Calkins and Colleagues from TCRWP
Grade 6 Unit Map

Unit #1: Raising the Level of Personal Narrative and Edging Toward Memoir	Time: September
Overview Narrative writing is an essential life skill and is a key ingredient in all non-narrative forms as well. This unit stresses the importance of students incorporating all they know about narrative writing right from the start of the year. Since your students should by now be quite familiar with the rituals of a writers' workshop, it is not necessary to spend weeks establishing them. A quick review and reflection should suffice with particular attention paid to the use and importance of writers' notebooks. Additionally, it is important to reinforce the notion that the goal of writing workshop is to lift the level of one's writing. An on-demand writing assessment should be given very early to gauge what students know about narrative writing. This task will likely show that the most students have an understanding of the essentials of narrative writing and are ready to write one effective personal narrative during the unit. After a few days of entry writing, students will be ready to reread all their entries (maybe during a share session) and select one seed idea for the narrative they will eventually publish. They will then spend a few days rehearsing before devoting one intense day to a first draft. Lessons on revision will focus on students rereading, rethinking, and envisioning their stories with a focus on storytelling versus summarizing. As students learn about narrative writing, some of the lessons will be explicit (taught through minilessons and conferences) and some implicit (by looking at mentor texts). Students need to know that their ideas matter and their voices count. This unit provides opportunity for both student and teacher to honor this. Part One: Generating Narrative Writing • Study a mentor text as a means of inspiration and emulation • Review/Remind students of their repertoire of strategies for topic generation and the expectation that it take no more than five minutes to complete this process • In a single day while generating ideas, writers produce more than one entry • Ideas for narratives can come from turning points, emotions, or major issues Part Two: Revising Your Students' Knowledge of Narrative Writing Even Before They Write Their Draft • Remind/Reteach the essentials of narrative writing (zoom in, movie in the mind, create a timeline etc.) • Writers select a seed idea and rehearse for writing Part Three: Writing a Rough Draft Quickly • Using their timeline and movie in their mind write a draft quickly i.e. "flash-draft" (one class period?) • Teachers should be monitoring student writing to assure storytelling rather than summarizing Part Four: Revising Drafts • Assess and determine need for small group strategy instruction e.g., students who are using too much dialogue • Good writing comes from a variety of thought, action, and dialogue

How to Align Literacy Instruction, Assessment, and Standards Nancy L. Akhavan, 2004 In this book Nancy Akhavan details the stories and strategies that enabled her school to move from under performing status to one in which students achieve and teachers have a whole new understanding of targeted instruction sensitive assessment and meaningful curriculum There is much to appreciate in what she says from her attention to thinking small and understanding the power of the details her emphasis on planning and goal setting to the seriousness with which she takes the standards and incorporates them into the life of the classroom Drawing on the work of the best in the business Lucy Calkins David and Yvonne Freeman and Tony Alvarado Akhavan made professional development the heartbeat of her school as she helped her faculty understand that their work begins and ends with continuous assessment of their students Now she helps readers of her book learn how child centered assessment leads to strategic instruction how to best support multilingual learners how to organize for yearlong learning how to think through precise workshop instruction in minilessons how to develop meaningful curriculum around units of study how to create a vibrant school community where standards and accountability stem from regular assessment and examination of instructional practices Akhavan provides immediately useful information for any elementary teacher principal or curriculum developer Read her book and understand how to use standards as a way to connect meaningful instruction to students not as a bar that students have to reach or a barrier to real teaching and learning
