GANNON, 2022-01-05 A simple to use guide designed to help new parents when they most need help Laid out in easy to understand language this book puts information at their fingertips New Baby 101 Lois Wattis (Midwife), 2017 As a Midwife Lactation Consultant Mother and Grandmother I am often reminded that new parents need an owner's manual to take with them as they walk out of the hospital carrying their newborn home. New parents have so much to learn in such a short time and every parent wants to do everything right which no one can of course. Even the most capable organised parents who are well prepared for their new roles realise there is so much to learn and they often feel totally overwhelmed by their new responsibilities. I recognised there is a need for a concise easy to find reliable resource for new parents who are negotiating this steep learning curve. I know there isn't much time for reading and this generation of parents expect instant information from the internet and or their phone. This can also be a time of information overload so parents need to be discerning about advice received from well meaning others and the internet. Remember if it doesn't feel right it probably isn't right. Parents need to trust their instincts as they already know their baby better than anyone else. So new parents here is your practical guide for the first few months of your parenting journey. These early weeks are precious even though they pass in a blur of elation and sleep deprivation. You can trust the information provided in New Baby 101 is based on the best evidence and research and my vast practical experience helping new parents. Little Steps for New Parents Sandy Briggs, 2003. Organised into 52 weekly lessons corresponding with a baby's age this guide teaches parents about their baby's brain development as it happens. Each week's activity combines building a child's intelligence and emotional control with natural parenting instincts. These activities support a baby's strong motivation to learn and teach parents how infants learn allowing parents to create more fun and instructive activities on their own. Feeding safety and health are addressed in the appropriate weeks. Parents can also record fun things the baby learned or did that week creating a personalised keepsake.
