

Lab 10: Lab 10: Faulting - Structural Geology

A. Introduction

Geologists use structural maps to show the distribution of faults. These maps show the location of faults and the direction of movement along the faults. They also show the distribution of the different types of faults (normal, thrust, and strike-slip).

- The structural map shows the distribution of faults and the direction of movement along the faults.
- The structural map shows the distribution of the different types of faults (normal, thrust, and strike-slip).
