

Expository Writing

Expository writing is, without a doubt, the genre that your child will use most often in their school careers and on into their working lives. By definition, expository writing is written to inform an audience of others. You will see this type of writing from your child in the form of research papers, reports, essays, response to literature, how-to pieces, compare/contrast pieces, and writing across the curriculum. As an adult this form of writing is seen as a college admission or job application essay, a query letter, proposal, or inter-office email.

With this in mind, your child will learn the foundation and specific skills to be a successful writer in this genre. Empowering Writers materials have been designed to build the necessary skills: organization, writing broad yet distinct main ideas, writing a variety of supporting details, using statistics and information that have been researched, crafting attention-grabbing introductions, and writing powerful conclusions.

The following pages from The Comprehensive Expository Writing Guide have been chosen for parents as both background on Empowering Writers and specific techniques taught in expository writing. When reading magazine and newspaper articles these skill areas are great jumping off points for discussion.
