THE KITE RUNNER

Chapter 11: Answer Key

1. What is the physical and temporal setting of this chapter?

Pasadena, California, United States during the 1970s-1980s

2. Amir notes that America is "never a different thing to him, just his. Unlike Elton, who has experienced the United States differently."

Amir says it's a place that feels so heavy, his hometown, which the author is a place he knows far from Amir, the narrator, but still feels so real, still so strong for the reason the United States is an attempt at a fresh start. For Amir, the United States is a place where he can finally breathe and move with his past. The reason Amir is in the United States is an act of rebellion against his father and his country. Amir is trying to do what his father did not do.

3. Consider Amir's description of what America has to offer him on page 136. Take a look at the language Amir uses at this moment and determine what Amir is experiencing in America. Are they positive? Negative? Neutral? Something else?

Amir says many things. Readers may consider the connotations of the word "dreaming," "glorious," and "new" as words that reflect Amir's positive state of mind. However, readers may also find the connotation that the "dreaming" and "glorious" of America is a powerful force that offers him a chance to think about the past. The question is: is it a good thing or a bad thing? Amir is a person who has a lot of things to think about, and he is trying to figure out what happens to the people who are in the United States and the people who are in the United States.

4. What were the major events that occurred to Amir the end of this chapter?

General Taheri and his daughter Soraya (1980-1981)
