

CHAPTER 11: SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS

In Chapter 11 of To Kill a Mockingbird, Scout remembers Mrs. Henry Lafayette Dubose, a nasty woman who harasses Jem and Scout every time they walk past her house. Her behavior eventually pushes Jem to his breaking point. When Mrs. Dubose rudely criticizes Atticus for defending Tom Robinson, Jem returns and destroys her camellia bushes with Scout's baton.

That evening, Atticus sends Jem to apologize to Mrs. Dubose for his actions. He promises to come every Saturday to tend the bushes, but Mrs. Dubose insists he come every day for the next month to read to her. For the next month, accompanied by Scout, Jem treks to Mrs. Dubose's house. Even though she continues, making snide remarks about Atticus, Jem reads to her until she falls asleep. Shortly after Jem finishes his month-long sentence, Mrs. Dubose dies.

Atticus reveals that she had been addicted to morphine but had made a commitment to beat her addiction. Her vile behavior and mood swings were a side effect of withdrawal. Atticus wanted Jem and Scout to see the courage of her fight, even if it meant a painful death. This chapter illustrates the parallel between Mrs. Dubose's fight to beat her addiction and Atticus's fight for a less racist world. Both Mrs. Dubose and Atticus know they are going to lose their fights, yet take them on anyway.

Scout and Jem are completely baffled as to why Atticus would take on a case he knows he is going to lose. However, Atticus explains that losing is not a good reason not to try.

CHAPTER 12: SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS

In Chapter 12 of To Kill a Mockingbird, summer is back and Jem is about to turn 12. Jem's adolescent angst is starting to show. He is continually telling Scout to stop bothering him. Worst of all, he tells her to start acting more like a woman, after years of telling her to stop acting like a girl.

Any hope for a fun summer feels lost when Dill writes to say he cannot come. He reports having a new stepfather and says they are going to build a fishing boat together. He then assures Scout of his love and promises to come get her when he saves enough money. On top of that, Atticus is called to an emergency session of the state legislature. In Atticus' absence, Calpurnia takes the Finch children to her African American church. A woman named Lula confronts Calpurnia and asks her why she is bringing white people to their church.

They got their church, we got ours, she says. Calpurnia tells her to mind her own business. Reverend Sykes greets them warmly and finds them a seat, while the congregation meets them with kindness. The congregation takes up a collection for Tom Robinson's wife to help while her husband is on trial. Scout and Jem learn about the struggles in the black community. After the service, Jem, Scout, and Calpurnia have a wild discussion about language, education, and life experience,

All revolving around the differences between blacks and whites. When Scout and Jem return home, they are surprised to find Aunt Alexandra waiting for them. Because the story takes
